My message to the outside world is quite clear: The resolute implementation of the adjustment policies and structural economic reforms are the key to take the lead both in Turkey and all around the globe. Turkey’s recent strong macro-economic performance has been a reflection of emphasis on structural reform efforts. Starting from the financial sector, and with the accelerated privatization process, sweeping reforms conduct most of its foreign trade with the EU and the OECD countries. Being one of the leading members of the OECD, Turkey also became a founding member of the World Trade Organization in 1995. Turkey’s membership to the EU is a process, which has its roots back in the late 1950’s. Turkey was declared a candidate destined to become a member of the EU in 1999, and it is now in the process of accession negotiations.

Turkey is situated in a geography where one fourth of the world's GNP and one fourth of the world's population exist. Easy access to the crossroads of East and West is strategic, our entrepreneurs are renowned for their dynamism, and our labor force is skilled and industrious. Today, my country has raised its income per capita to a level of USD 5000 with its qualified labor force. When we take into consideration that this figure reaches to 8000 USD when adjusted by “Purchasing Power Parity”, Turkey, as a country of 72 million people, is strategically attractive. Today, my country is a dynamic emerging market. My Government has been committed to the implementation of its economic policies and continuity in macro-economic policies are the key to produce better macro-economic results. Behind this success rests an atmosphere of sustainability, transparency, determinacy and delivering on its commitments enabled Turkey to build confidence not only in the domestic economic policy. It has also been very transparent and detailed in explaining the essences of these economic policies. Hence, predictability, confidence and stability which is created by a strong political will. My Government has been committed to the implementation of its social and economic programs in order to keep welfare much more equitably all over the country. Our major effort are aimed at increasing the production capacity and export of Turkey, and expanding the sustainable development and renewable energy sector. A key component of Turkey’s economic growth is the ongoing process to transform itself into a more competitive, advanced, and high value-added economy. This transformation into an advanced economy requires not only the growth of national companies but also the most efficient international companies, which are the main drivers of economic growth in the world economies. For that reason, Turkey is ready to absorb the most advanced, efficient, and competitive global companies into its economic structure. We are implementing a policy oriented export strategy, in order to trigger long term industrial stability. We have implemented a tax incentive program for foreign companies that are located in export zones, thus paving the way for the acceleration of capital inflow and export-oriented investment. There is no restriction on individuals and firms. For instance, it takes now literally just one day to start a company in Turkey. Furthermore, as part of the liberalization process, we have abolished the minimum foreign investment requirement for foreign investors in recent years.

I am confident that this book would help to promote further Turkey’s increasing potential as an emerging market. Concluding my remarks, I would like to express my gratitude to the GEOC team for their tireless efforts to make this book a reality. I hope that you will get interested in this book and that you will continue to pay attention to the developments in Turkey. Sincerely yours,

Prime Minister of the Republic of Turkey
